this book contains 2 500 bibliographical entries covering most aspects of the history of victorian england originally published in 1976 working class radicalism in mid victorian england examines working class radicalism in the mid victorian period and suggests that after the fading of chartist militancy the radical tradition was preserved in a working class subculture that enabled working men to resist the full consolidation of middle class hegemony the book traces the growth of working class radicalism as it developed dialectically in confrontation with middle class liberal ideology in the generation after waterloo intellectual forces were of central importance in shaping the character of the working class left and the enlightenment in particular as the chief source of ideological weapons that were turned against the established order the enlightenment also provided the intellectual foundations of the middle class ideology that was directed against the incipient threat of popular radicalism the book notes that the same intellectual forces that entered into the first half of the nineteenth century also shaped the value system that provided the foundations of mid victorian urban culture these forces also contributed to the rapprochement between working class liberalism bringing latent affinities to the surface it is also emphasised however that inherited ideas and traditions exercised their influence in interaction with the structure of power and status this book explores how different constituencies influenced the development of nineteenth century swimming in england and highlights the central role played by swimming professors these professionals were influential in inspiring participation in swimming particularly among women well before the amateur community created the amateur swimming association and this volume outlines some key life courses to illustrate their working practices female exhibitors were important to professors and chapter three discusses these natationists and their impact on women's swimming subsequent chapters address the employment opportunities afforded by new swimming baths and the amateur community that formed clubs and a national organization which excluded swimming professors many of whom subsequently worked successfully abroad dave day and margaret roberts argue that the critical role played by professors in developing swimming has been forgotten and suggest that their story is a reminder that individuals were just as important to the foundation of modern sport as the formation of amateur organizations this book considers section 21 of the divorce and matrimonial causes act 1857 and its significant impact on previously invisible married women in the 19th century tens of thousands of women used this little known section of the act to apply for orders from local magistrates courts to reclaim their rights of testation inheritance property ownership and dependent on local franchise qualifications ability to vote by examining the orders that were made and considering the women who applied for them the book challenges the mistaken belief that victorian england and wales were nations of married cohabiting couples the detailed statistical analysis and rich case studies presented here provide a totally new perspective on the legal status and experiences of married women in england and wales although many thousands of orders were granted between 1858 and 1900 their details remain unknown and unexamined primarily because census records did not consistently record dissolved marriages and there is no central index of applications made using sources including court records parliamentary papers newspaper reports census returns probate records and trade directories this book reconstructs the successful and unsuccessful experiences of women applying to magistrates courts and the court for divorce and matrimonial causes to protect their assets across regions and decades this book is concerned with the nineteenth century education family life and employment of working class girls and women based on extensive local research it also draws on evidence from social labour and women's history in a wide ranging analysis of the purposes and practices of girls education within a variety of forms of schooling both public and private discusses the history and gendered nature of education policy and the impact of policies on practice in education the articles represent a range of views and approaches to education demonstrating the complexity of educational experience and the influence of class race culture and gender
